

Ice-breaker: The Lost Suitcase

Imagine that you are on a trip and your suitcase gets lost and the identification tag falls off. In order to find the true owner, the suitcase is passed on to various locations to airport officials who have no choice but to search its contents. Fortunately your suitcase has many items (diaries, pictures, valuables, and tools etc) that give information about you, such as the following:

- your hometown and background ( ex: activities you did when you were young)
- the people in your family
- things you love and things you hate
- your hobbies and interests
- your favourite movies, music, books, possessions and food etc
- interesting things you have done in your life (ex: watched the Olympics in Beijing)

In the suitcase below write your name and three important and interesting facts about you. When you are finished we will then start this highly engaging interactive activity.
